The Wharton Grove camp meeting on the Rappahannock River, near Weems Wharf, in the southern part of Lancaster, began yesterday. This encampment is held under the auspices of the Baptist denomination, with the Rev. Frederick W. Claybrook at the head of the management. The Rev. H. M. Wharton, pastor of the Brantly Baptist Church, in Baltimore, for whom the camp is named, and who is to be the principal speaker during the meetings, arrived on the steamer from Baltimore this morning. He will be assisted by the Rev. C. L. Jackson, D. D. a noted Baptist evangelist of Philadelphia. The Rev. J. T. Watts, State Sunday-school superintendent, and the Rev. Mr. Perryman will isso assist in the meetings. Professor Bush will have charge of the singing. The examination of teachers for license to teach in the public schools of Virginia has been going on here for the last three days. Only one applicant took the examination, nearly all the teachers of this county having taken the examination at the summer normal school at Fredericksburg. Dr. Frank W. Lewis, the superintendent of schools for Lancaster and North-tumberland, has returned from a visit to the Fredericksburg Normal School, where he found that his division had a larger representation than any other division in this circuit, and that Lancaster has a larger delegation than any other county. Dr. Lewis is planning to hold a teachers' institute for the two counties of his district just before the schools open for the next session.

Wants Patrons of Bristol Schools to Decide Who Is Principal.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Bristol, Va., July 30.—Superintendent on S. Rhea McChesney, of the city schools of Bristol, who is also a member of the State Board of Education, has been denied every proposition he has made to the city board here looking to the retention by him of the office of supervising principal of the city schools. The board elected Charles E. Anderson, of Smyth county, over Superintendent McChesney, who held the position last year, thereby depriving McChesney of 11.290 of his salary of $1,400 for the joint position of superintendent and principal.

McChesney, as a last resort, proposed that the matter be submitted to the patrons to determine whether he or Anderson should be principal. The board to-day published a statement rejecting this proposition, and criticaling McChesney severely for his position, urging that he should end the matter by signing Anderson's certificate as superintendent, which he is expected to do. Concluding, the board says: "The board is required to select teachers an it, not you, is responsible to the patrons for its action. Your proposition cannot be accepted."

Enthusiastic Meeting Held at Tazewell Courthouse.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Tazewell, Va., July 30.—An'enthusiastic good roads meeting was held in the courthouse here this afternoon, being attended by a large number of citizens of the county, who favor progress and civic advancement. A good roads club was organized by the election of Ewing Lawson, of Burke's Garden, as president, and Dr. R. P. Copenhaver as secretary. The two officers are young men, and are known as "boosters" of anything they take hold of. An enthusiastic speech was made by William G. P. Worth, of Tazewell, who demonstrated by figures and facts that Tazewell can well take care of a $500,000 bond issue, the county's appropriation at this time being sufficient to pay interest on $500,000, and provide a sinking fund of $7,000 or $8,000.

An educational campaign will be started at once, and in a few months Tazewell county will yote the bond issue, and build such fine roads that the rest of the counties in the Southwest will follow suit.

ELECTRIC DELIVERY WAGON MAKES MORE THAN

Extreme Service Test Given Electric Vehicles by Virginia Railway & Power Company Shows Wagon Exceeding Expectations

The Virginia Railway and Power Company has just put in service an electric automobile delivery wagon. The number of services that must be connected with their lines daily has become so great that it is impossible to get around to them in the old-fashioned way. They have been compelled, therefore, to secure a means of transportation that will enable the man who makes the final connections and sets the meters and lamps from Ginter Park to Forest Hill and Woodland Heights, from Westhampton to the Masonic Home, all in the same day. This little automobile will do it, although it cannot exceed the speed limit in the city. It is like a doctor's horse, that has a steady trot, that covers more ground than the racer. Many inquiries have been made as to whether such a machine would climb the Broad Street hill. It will not only climb the Broad Street hill, but will climb the hill on St. James Street by the Almshouse, which is much harder to do. It will also plow its way along the Nine-Mile Road, and any of the sandy roads in Brookland Park, then do it all over again, and then some.

Just to see what this car would do, it was loaded with its full load of 1,000 lbs.

Just to see what this car would do, it was loaded with its full load of 1,000 lbs. and started out Wednesday morning at 9:13. It first went up Ninth Street from the river bank to Broad Street, and then ran across the city, east and west, and north and south, and out through the suburbs, for a total run of fifty miles. It went up one of the Broad Street hills four times; it climbed the St. James Street hill; it came up Main Street hill twice; it went down on the Nine-Mile Road; it went out through Barton Heights and Ginter Park to Brook's Store; it went to Stop 27 on the Westhampton line. Just to fill out a full fifty miles it went from Seventh and Main Streets to Lombardy, and again to the Boulevard.

The driver took an hour for dinner, and the car got back to the starting point

The driver took an hour for dinner, and the car got back to the starting point at 4:30, having run fifty miles over worse roads than it would encounter in a single day of ordinary service. In addition to this, the car ran 1.6 miles with only partial load. It was then ready to recharge.

Another advantage of electric trucks for heavy work is that a moter can be mounted on the front end of the truck and operated by the same battery that moves the truck, to load heavy objects, such as safes, drawing them on quickly, and thereby saving the time that is now lost in loading heavy objects by means of a hand wind-
